Level 2

Sita is a little girl. She likes writing. Whenever she writes, she feels so happy!

She writes about the bees.

She writes about the trees.

She writes about the swing and about everything.

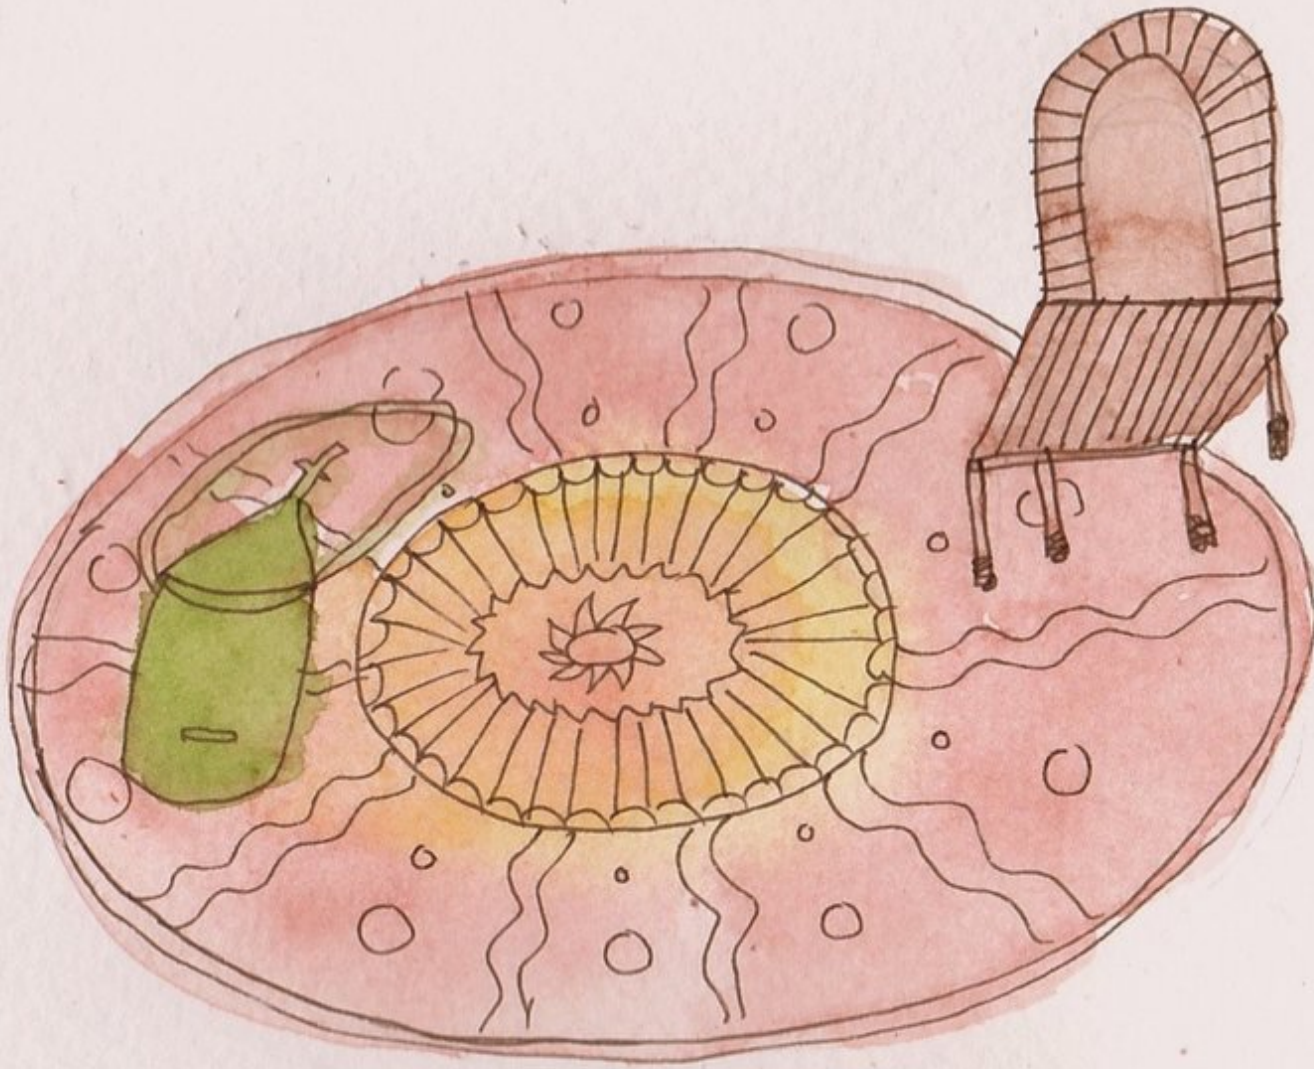

One day Sita saw a beautiful blue bird on a big Guava tree. It had shiny blue feathers and a long brown beak. It was singing sweetly and Sita loved it.

“I am going to write about this pretty blue bird,” said Sita.

She looked inside her bag to take out a book and her favourite purple pencil.

She looked and looked and looked, but the pencil wasn't there.

“Where did my pencil go?” thought Sita. She ran back to her house to look for it.

She looked on the floor.

She looked on the chair.

She looked everywhere, but the pencil wasn't there.

“What happened, dear? Why are you sad?” asked her mother, looking at the little girl.

“I can’t find my pencil, Amma,” said Sita.

“Oh, dear! I am so sorry. I took your pencil in the morning. I forgot to put it back, but it is somewhere on the rack,” spoke Amma, sounding sorry. It must feel so bad to see your daughter worried.

Amma came out with a purple pencil and Sita's eyes shone with a twinkle.

She took the pencil from her mother's hand and started dancing all around.

Now Sita can write about everything again.

She can write stories.
She can write poems.
She can write a song and we can sing along.
